so far, this school year has been pretty easy, the most fun I'm having is learning how to draw realistically. It's been hard but rewarding when I learn a new skill! I also joined the "Sunrise" club at my school, it focuses on climate change activism. I've become secretary of the club. I'm really excited to start gardening more, that's always been a hobby of mine.

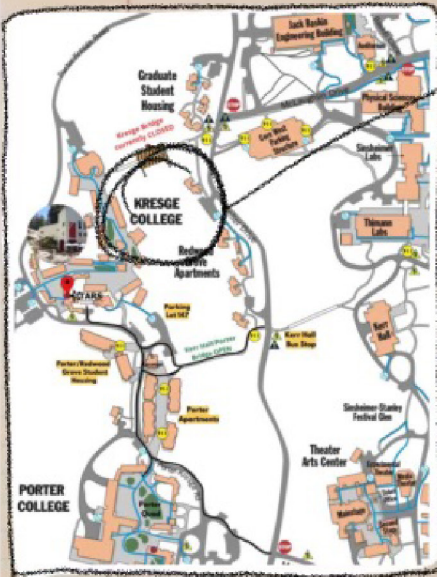

I'm also apart of the pottery club with a bunch of my buddies, last year I took ceramics 1 which really opened my mind about pottery, I've become really inspired by it and I see my self becoming serious about it later in my life. Since I'm in the club now, I get to work with clay and I can get really creative with what I'm making, and learn more about pottery!

MY SCHEDULE

Im feeling ready to go but also terrified!!!

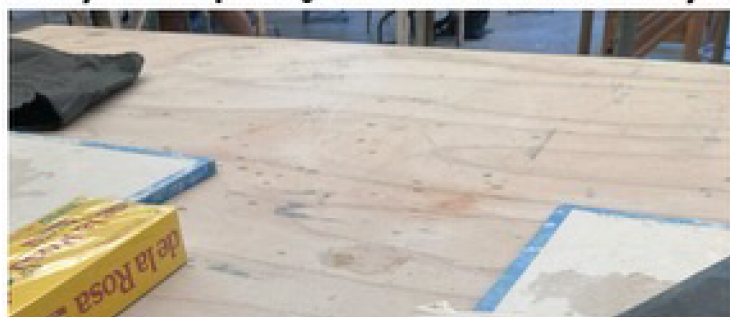

Packing ↘

I've been at University for 3 weeks now as a film/media major. I am a commuter student since I am staying in LA and so far have enjoyed it! My classes are spaced throughout the week Monday- Friday, but I don't have complaints. I am enrolled in 6 courses, which include my digital production class, philosophy, honors English, first-year seminar, music and culture, and ceramics 1. A majority of my classes though are surprisingly small, but I kind of like that since in some way it feels like less pressure and I can better understand the lessons.

My favorite classes would definitely be digital production and ceramics.

I am also in the underglazing phase of my ceramics pop project. We are replicating an item we would find at the grocery store and looking at the graphics of the label, the texture and shape of the packaging, etc. Recently, I have been trying to better my diet (locking in this year) and have been looking for "clean" sweet treats and my favorite thanks to Ariel Yavuncu on TikTok is HONEY MAMAS. They are truffle bars and THEY ARE SO GOOD honestly salivating just thinking about them. I love the lemon blueberry flavor and it's also the one with my favorite packing out of all the flavors. It's my first time working with clay so I am enjoying the experience. At first, I was getting worried since our first working day. I realized too late that my slabs were too thin, but went in before we met again and was able to build my object well.

I was worried about feeling out of place at school especially since I only knew one person there (my friend from high school but we barely see one another being busy with our other classes), but I am really happy to have found friends in my film group! We are almost done with our first project together and it's coming together really well!

University of the Pacific

I'm studying chemical engineering at Cooper Union. To be honest, it's been difficult. NYC is so beautiful but it doesn't feel like home, and maybe it never will. But that fact has definitely made me love LA more. Distance makes the heart grow fonder I guess. It's sad because I can feel the physical distance between NYC and LA. Anyways, besides homesickness I have been absurdly busy trying to be an adult. Now I actually eat my vitamin supplements, think about balanced meals, and have been interviewing ^{for} and working office jobs. But this is a love letter to LA. I miss you more than I could ever imagine and am counting down the days until I can see my beloved (but objectively ugly) LA River, stinky, scary metro, and cali sun. Emphasis on the sun... I can already feel my tan fading...

Love,
SARIA

recap:

Hi! It's Leonora! I've only been with eggsquared for a few months, but I have truly enjoyed the experience. I loved discovering so many talented artists & individuals who contribute their work to the zine! I enjoy the creative environment that everyone creates and I hope this new school year and upcoming year in general brings the best

Dear eggsquared fans,
Thank you for supporting this online zine and helping us become more well-known. It's so great seeing so many people come to our shows and submit amazing artwork! I can't wait to see how our magazine will grow in the future. ;)

(Have a great school year)

Eggs, thank you so much for such a beautiful year. Before, we were only online but thanks to Persona non grata we did our first vending stand. Before that, I never thought of doing anything in person. I remember scrambling to make merch for Finn's show cause ~~we~~ when Finn proposed that we ~~to~~ vend I didn't even know what to sell! I loved it.
Then we did Dylan's shell shocker
^{for Dylan's bday} and it was so stressful prepping
it but I absolutely loved it too.
Who would've known we would do so many in person events?! It's ~~was~~ so different seeing everyone
in person and meeting you all.
All you eggs have changed my life forever and I am so excited for another year with you! Thank you for supporting us and making my dreams come true. I am forever grateful.

Love you always, Saria ♡

happy 1 year eggs,
we love you lots <3
